

Badrutt's Palace Hotel with a new Executive Chef

St. Moritz, 21st July 2020 – For 125 years Badrutt's Palace Hotel has been synonymous with excellent service and a cuisine of the highest standard. From 1st August Maxime Luvara is assuming the position of Executive Chef in the traditional luxury hotel in St Moritz and with his international experience he will not only add his own special touch to the hotel's gastronomic experience but will also lead it successfully into the future.

Luvara began his career at well known addresses such as Troigros in Roanne and Hôtel de Paris in Monaco. He also worked with the French star chef Alain Ducasse for over ten years in Le Louis XV among others, so his long standing experience, international influences from France, Italy and Asia, as well as his great passion for the food industry are all a great premium for the five star Swiss hotel. After his time in France and Italy his career path led him to the One and Only Le St. Géran Hotel in Mauritius, as well as the Burj Al Arab in Dubai, before he started working at the Intercontinental / Regent in Hong Kong in 2017.

“I am really looking forward to my role as the new Executive Chef in such a legendary hotel as Badrutt's Palace. It is a fantastic opportunity for me to work with such a great team and to enhance and develop the culinary experience with new ideas. It is important for me to work with seasonal products and to allow them to speak for themselves. Even in the kitchen, sometimes less is more,” says Maxime Luvara.

“It is so great for us to have won Maxime Luvara as Executive Chef and we are convinced we have found in him a chef who brings the right spirit to the hotel, along with his international experience,” says Richard Leuenberger, Managing Director of Badrutt's Palace Hotel. There are eight restaurants under one roof at the five star hotel, including the well known «Chesa Veglia», the 2 Michelin starred IGNIV by Andreas Caminada, King's Social House led by British star chef Jason Atherton and La Coupole - Matsuhisa by Japanese star chef Nobu, in addition to three bars.
