PRE EMBARGO SELECTION

H. UPMANN

H.Upmann is among the oldest cigar brands in existence. Around 1840, banker Herman Upmann opened a branch office in Havana, which provided many opportunities to send cigars home to Europe. The possibilities of a commercial endeavour became clear to Upmann and in 1844 he invested in a cigar factory and the H. Upmann brand was launched. H.Upmann bought their own cigar factory in 1844, now known as the José Martí Factory, in Havana. Through the late 1800s, the H. Upmann brand gained international recognition at various exhibitions and won seven gold medals which still adorn the lithographed art on today's H. Upmann boxes.

PARTAGAS

Partagás is a current pre-Revolution brand, established circa 1827. The current Partagás factory was constructed in 1845 and this is the year that the Aniversario humidors date from. The range comprises full-strength cigars, using tobacco from the premium Vuelta Abajo region. Until mid to late 1970s, all cigars were pre-1960 releases. Since then there have been further releases. This listing does not include the many (possibly in excess of 100) cigars discontinued before the 1970s.

RAMON ALLONES

The brand was created in Cuba by brothers Ramón and Antonio Allones in 1845. It's supposedly the first cigar brand to have utilized colourful lithographs for box art, the first brand to utilize bands on cigars, and the first to package cigars in the "8-9-8" style. The brand went through numerous ownership changes before it was finally bought by the Cifuentes family and production was moved to the famous Partagás Factory, where Ramón Allones cigars are still made to this day. Traditionally, Ramon Allones cigars are medium to full-strength in flavour, and the blend shares some of the characteristics of Partagás as far as overall body, vitolas, and packaging. It has always been produced in smaller quantities than Partagás.
