“JOLIE, GÉNÉREUX, AND JOYEUX” IN ST. MORITZ

DANIEL ROSE BRINGS HIS SIGNATURE CUISINE TO BADRUTT'S PALACE HOTEL

From December 20, 2024, to January 3, 2025, Daniel Rose will bring his playful interpretation of French cuisine to St. Moritz. Known for touching not just the palate but also the heart, Rose creates memorable culinary experiences at his restaurants Le Coucou in New York and La Bourse et La Vie in Paris.

St. Moritz, December 10, 2024 - Michelin-starred chef Daniel Rose, renowned for captivating gourmets in Paris and New York, will host his first culinary residency in Switzerland at Badrutt's Palace Hotel over the holiday season. "Daniel Rose is celebrated for his modern take on classic French cuisine. His restaurants, Le Coucou and La Bourse et La Vie, have long been culinary hotspots recognized by both diners and the media. In St. Moritz, he will combine tradition, locality, and seasonality with the cuisine of Badrutt's Palace Hotel to create a deeply emotional dining experience. He uniquely integrates the stories of grand hotels into his dishes," says Richard Leuenberger, Managing Director of Badrutt's Palace Hotel.

A CULINARY EXPERIENCE ROOTED IN TRADITION AND EXCELLENCE

Rose's creations evoke an atmosphere of jolie, généreux, and joyeux while harkening back to the era when dining was synonymous with evening entertainment. His menu in St. Moritz will feature signature dishes such as pike quenelles with Champagne beurre blanc and gently seared lobster with green pepper sauce and eight-year-old Bas-Armagnac, accompanied by delicate canapés and shared hors d'oeuvres.

"I am honored to bring a part of my cuisine to Badrutt's Palace, a hotel that embodies elegance, heritage, and true hospitality. My team and I will present a culinary experience that honors Badrutt's legacy while opening a new chapter in the hotel's festive tradition," says Chef Daniel Rose. "This collaboration provides a unique opportunity to connect with guests amidst the beauty of the Swiss Alps, where the splendor of the landscape meets the history and glamour of Badrutt's Palace."

Dinner will be served at 7:00 PM and 9:00 PM, with optional wine and cocktail pairings.

ALPINE INSPIRATION

"This will be an exceptional offering for our guests. Michelin-starred chef Daniel Rose aligns beautifully with our diverse restaurant portfolio. Through his culinary honesty, he creates a holistic experience that will be truly unique," says Executive Chef Jeremy Degras of Badrutt's Palace Hotel. Rose will incorporate premium local ingredients, selected in collaboration with the hotel, marking a key distinction from his Paris and New York offerings. This integration will make his residency at Badrutt's Palace a one-of-a-kind experience.

Badrutt's Palace Hotel is known as a gourmet destination, boasting 11 restaurants during the winter season 2024/25—more than any other hotel in St. Moritz.

ABOUT MICHELIN-STARRED CHEF DANIEL ROSE

Michelin-starred chef Daniel Rose became a prominent figure in international gastronomy after opening his first restaurant, Spring, in Paris in 2006. He currently helms the acclaimed Le Coucou in New York and La Bourse et La Vie in Paris. Originally from Chicago, Rose discovered his passion for cooking while studying at the American University of Paris, which led him to refine his craft at the Institut Bocuse in Lyon.

His early career included mentorship under legendary chefs such as Paul Bocuse in Lyon and Yannick Alléno at Le Meurice in Paris. Rose honed his expertise at establishments like Auberge des Abers in Brittany and Le Pré du Moulin near Avignon, experiences that instilled his lifelong respect for quality and precision. In 2016, Rose opened Le Coucou in New York, a contemporary homage to French cuisine that earned him his first Michelin star and a James Beard Award for Best New Restaurant. Rose's work extends to Air France's business class dining and has been recognized with the Order of Agricultural Merit by the French Republic in 2022.
